FIELD MEETINGS AND SOCIETY MEETINGS

Series that Starts Today With Fruit Growers is of Interest to Eastern Connecticut Agriculturists—Six Societies Have Demonstrations There in Next Two Weeks

The extension service at the Connecticut Agricultural College is growing to large proportions and extending the field of its influence yearly.

Director C. D. Jarvis is in general charge of the various meetings, which have already included the Country Life Conference for rural ministers and community leaders, on July 15-16, and the Eastern Connecticut Business Men's outing on the 16th, both of which events met with gratifying success.

This week the Connecticut Pomological society and the Vegetable Growers' association gather at Storrs and are followed next week by the dairy breeders and farm managers, the dairy men and finally by the poultry men. Thus there is in the series some portion which ought to appeal, and is appealing, to a large number of the progressive farmers of Eastern Connecticut. The programme for the ensuing agricultural field meetings are therefore of interest to all.

Wednesday, July 22, the Connecticut Pomological society, 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. Visits will be made to various departments and demonstrations will be in progress. 7:30 p. m. address, subject to be announced later. L. L. Merrill, president N. Y. State Fruit Growers' association, Kinderhook, N. Y.

Thursday, July 23, the Connecticut Pomological society and the Vegetable Growers' association, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.
